DBS and POSB, two of Singapore's leading banks, have a fascinating relationship. While they operate as separate entities, the truth is that DBS and POSB are actually part of the same banking group. In 1998, DBS acquired POSB, and ever since then, the two have been closely intertwined. Despite their coexistence, DBS and POSB maintain distinct branding and identities.

Both DBS and POSB offer a wide range of banking services to cater to different customer needs, but they share many similarities. For instance, customers can access their accounts at both DBS and POSB ATMs, and they can also enjoy the convenience of using any DBS or POSB branch for various transactions.

So while DBS and POSB may have their own unique characteristics, at the end of the day, they are part of the same family, with the shared goal of providing excellent banking services to the people of Singapore.

Is DBS the largest bank in Singapore?

The largest bank in Singapore is DBS - DBS Branches in Singapore

DBS, a prominent bank in Singapore, holds an eminent position in the country's banking industry. With its extensive range of services and strong customer base, DBS has established itself as one of the leading banks in Singapore. Known for its innovative financial solutions and stellar customer service, DBS has consistently demonstrated its commitment to meeting the diverse needs of its clientele.

In terms of size, DBS can certainly be considered one of the largest banks in Singapore. Its wide network of branches, ATMs, and digital platforms enables customers to access their accounts conveniently and efficiently. Moreover, DBS's robust financial performance and market capitalization contribute to its prominent position in the industry.

However, it is important to note that the banking landscape in Singapore is highly competitive, with other established banks competing for market share. While DBS may be regarded as one of the largest banks in Singapore, the banking industry is dynamic, and rankings can fluctuate over time.

In summary, DBS is a significant player in the banking sector in Singapore, renowned for its comprehensive range of services and strong market position.

Can I keep my DBS account after leaving Singapore?

Yes, it is possible to keep your DBS account even if you decide to leave Singapore. DBS understands that many of its customers lead global lifestyles and may need access to their accounts even when they are no longer residing in Singapore.

For this reason, DBS provides various options for account holders who move abroad. One of the options is to convert your DBS account into an international account, which allows you to continue managing your finances remotely.

With an international account, you can still access your funds, conduct transactions, and enjoy the benefits of DBS's digital platforms and services.

So, whether you are relocating for work or leisure, you can rest assured that your DBS account can accompany you on your international journey, providing you with financial convenience and peace of mind.

To sum it all up...

In Singapore, DBS and POSB are different entities under the same parent company.

While DBS is considered the largest bank in Singapore, it is important to note that DBS and POSB function as separate banks.

As for keeping a DBS account after leaving Singapore, it depends on the individual circumstances and the banking regulations of the country you are relocating to.

It is advisable to consult with the bank directly to determine the possibilities and requirements for maintaining your DBS account.

Overall, DBS branches in Singapore offer convenient opening hours and are located in various areas of the city, making them easily accessible for customers.
